

Brendan Tsang

My name is Brendan Tsang. I am a first-generation Asian-American college student. I am currently in my third-year studying Operations & Supply Chain and Information Systems. For this upcoming election, I am running for student body president on the Tsang Ticket. I am running for student body president because I want to make a positive impact towards every student attending the University of Utah.

Coming from a diverse, low socioeconomic background, I understand how difficult it is to navigate higher education. This past year, I served as a Presidential Intern and worked directly with the administration at the University of Utah to learn about the inner workings of this institution and higher education. Throughout this experience, I was able to understand the University's structure and when to utilize campus resources.

As someone who has been involved in many programs and organizations across campus, such as the Office of Orientation & Transition, First Ascent Scholarship program, Business Student Government, Student Alumni Board, ASUU, and more, I've learned to love the University of Utah—especially the community and student body that I hope to serve. I hope to use the experiences and knowledge I've gained these past three years to guide students throughout their journey at the University of Utah.

As your student body president, I would create a sense of unity and belonging at the University of Utah to ensure that each student feels welcome and finds their community. My team and I want to empower change in many different areas such as safety, sustainability, transportation/parking, advocacy, inclusion, and improving campus life. We want every student to understand the ASUU process, ASUU funding, and how tuition and fees impact ASUU. We are advocates for every student and wish them success during and after their time at the University of Utah. I understand the responsibilities associated with the role of student body president and plan to dedicate my time, team, and resources to improving the student experience at the University of Utah.
